

Pippa McIntosh is a corporate communications, government affairs and public relations professional.

Following a career spanning both commercial and public affairs roles in the healthcare industry, she's since gone on to consult in the oil and gas, racing, gaming, casino and entertainment industries, helping organisations build, grow and protect their external and internal reputations.

Currently, Pippa is an adviser in the Western Australian Government.

Pippa's love of waterpolo started at a young age, and continued throughout university where she played for the University of Western Australia. She's also played for clubs in both NSW and Victoria.
